ERODE

ABSTRACT

The Time series is a sequence of values arranged in a specific order of time. Prediction and analysis of food grains are an essential portion in agricultural statistics. Food grain production is a conspicuous portion in Indian agriculture. Agriculture shows the robust part in the Indian economy. The growth rate of agriculture production is usually decided by the show of food grains and non-food grain production. The present research work focused on production of food grains in India using time series data ranging from 1990- 91 to 2018-19. In this paper, Autoregressive Integrated Moving Average Model (ARIMA) and linear regression model for predicting food grain production of India were compared. And also Mean Absolute Error (MAE) and Root Mean Square Error (RMSE) were compared. The results were displayed numerically and graphically.

ABOUT THE JOURNAL

In this age of Commerce, Economics, Computer, I.T. & Management and cut throat competition, a group of intellectuals felt the need to have some platform, where young and budding managers and academicians could express their views and discuss the problems among their peers. This journal was conceived with this noble intention in view. This journal has been introduced to give an opportunity for expressing refined and innovative ideas in this field. It is our humble endeavour to provide a springboard to the upcoming specialists and give a chance to know about the latest in the sphere of research and knowledge. We have taken a small step and we hope that with the active co-operation of like-minded scholars, we shall be able to serve the society with our humble efforts.
